Debut of Miss Grace Lewellyn. The event which has so long challenge e fair debutante, was invested with so much generous interest, has come and gone, earing with it the record of Miss Lewellyn's uccess. She disappointed none, but she sat-sfied most that she has ability which, with ndustry, may ripen into excellence. The character she selected for the trying ordeal is one to challenge a very ripe experience of the stage. Defective as it is, it takes years of study and a thorough knowledge of stage iness to hide its shortcomings. One of these, the abrupt change from the wild and mischievous girl to the reflecting, sensible, and sometimes philosophical young woman, is more than even a Maggie Mitchell can onceal, but since it serves the purpose of harp contrast and enables a clever actress to display her powers in widely differing phases of life it is generally passed by as acceptable. This incongruity Miss Lewellyn could not cure. It was not to be expected that she would. New to the foot-lights, and "fresh from the people," as the politicians would park. —A large and valuable amount of real fateful life of "Fanchon" and not recall Miss Mitchell, Miss Putnam, and others who have won fame and made a name by it. But bearing in mind the distance in experience which separates the debutante of to-day from these 'old stagers,' she lost nothing, but rather gained by the comparison. In the shadow dance, the business of which is a great point and usually a hit with the actresses named, Miss Lewellyn was an improvement, since, instead of a touch of the ballet, she gave us a few steps and movements such as any artless and mischievous child, under such circumstances, might naturally under such circumstances, might naturally indulge. But it is not our purpose to pass in review, point by point, a performance that, taken altogether, is highly meritorious. Faults there were; faults were to be expected. But there was nothing like awkwardness or stage-fright, and prompting was not neces-sary. Her make-up was, of course, a close copy of that which has passed into the traditions of the theater, as was her stage business, save in the one point, where we think she made an improvement. Easy, self-possessed and graceful, and having both youth and beauty on her side, she had only to contend against a defect in her voice, which now and then would obtrude itself and spoil an otherwise very fair detivery. But this she will conquer in time, as she will whatever else of weakness or defect she may have exhibited es. D. L. To All, Particularly Invalids, spring is a trying season. Indications sickness should at once be attended to. Fat liseases may be caused by allowing the be els to become constipated and the system remain in a disordered condition until th disorder has time to develop itself. An ounof prevention is worth a pound of cure, an old and truthful saying. Therefore advise all who are troubled with the coplaints now very prevalent—headache, ind gestion, disordered liver, want of appetit nausea, or feverish skin, to take, without de lay, Schenck's Mandrake pills. We know no remedy so harmless and decisive in action. It at once strikes at the root of the of the malady. Families leaving home for the summer months should take three or four boxes of these pills with them. They have an almost instantaneous effect. They will re-lieve the patient of headache in one or two hours, and will rapidly cleanse the liver of surrounding bile, and will effectually prevent a bilious attack. They are sold by all drug-
